

Helping Pastors Help Their Parishioners

As a United Methodist pastor, you're called upon to help parishioners with emotional, social, health, economic or workplace concerns that challenge their well-being—and may reach beyond your expertise.

Turn to the Pastoral Consultation Line for peer guidance. You'll speak with an ordained minister who also is an experienced counselor—someone who understands your commitment to helping others in your service to Christ.

This service for clergy can help you:

- balance multiple demands for your time and attention within your ministry;
- address difficult situations in your congregation;
- approach parishioners facing personal challenges; and
- identify appropriate resources for parishioners struggling with substance abuse, marital conflict, illness, loss, mental health issues and other difficulties.
